

Abstract

Methods for identifying objects on a computer system are provided. One aspect provides a method for discriminating between system objects and non-system objects by 5 embedding a system identifier into a steganographic zone of a system object.